

ABSTRACT

An integrated communication and geographic positioning system and method provide integrated mobile communications with individual employees to automate administrative efforts. The system enables the determination of an individual's geographic position and the monitoring of an individual's activity. According to the present invention, such individual information is automatically formatted and accessible by a system user from any wireless communication array.